

TESTING FOR UNIFORMITY

D.S. Sivia¹, and S.G. Rawlings²

- (1) Rutherford Appleton Laboratory, Chilton, Oxon, OX11 0QX, UK
- (2) Department of Astrophysics, Keble Road, Oxford, OX1 3RH, UK
(E-mail address: dss@isise.rl.ac.uk)

Abstract

We present a Bayesian approach to testing for an underlying uniform distribution, given a sample of observations, based on a comparison with the alternatives defined by the maximum entropy principle when faced with limited moments information. A conventional test derived from the analysis of the expected moments, and their correlations, conditional on a null hypothesis of uniformity, is also developed.

Key Words: uniformity, moments, maximum entropy principle, model comparison